Relationship Violence*

What is Relationship Violence?

It's a pattern of behavior that establishes Power and Control over another person using fear, isolation, intimidation and often physical injury.

Ask yourself...

Is your partner or caregiver ever unpredictable – sometimes wonderful – but every once in a while very cruel or scary?

Do you feel isolated, like there's nowhere to turn for help, and that no one would believe you anyway?

Do you ever feel you have to say everything's okay, even when it's really not?

Do you feel nervous or frightened around your partner or caregiver?

Have you lost most or all of your friends since you've been in this relationship?

Do you ever feel worthless and with few options?

Have you ever experienced your boyfriend / girlfriend / partner / spouse or caregiver...

- blaming you for making them angry?
- calling you names, putting you down, or insulting you in front of others?
- limiting your access to money or preventing you from getting a job?
- causing you to feel afraid by smashing things, hurting your pets or displaying weapons?
- becoming very jealous of you for no reason?
- calling or paging you often?
- wanting to know where you are each minute of the day?
- not allowing you to spend time with your family and friends?
- intercepting e-mails and phone calls?
- threatening you if you told someone about an abusive incident?
- slapping, pinching, hitting or punching you?
- withholding your medication.
- forcing you to participate in unwanted sexual activity?
- making you do something you didn't want to do?

Remember...
It's not your fault!
